

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

PREFACE

A short experience has convinced me that an insufficient use is made of singing in connection with our study of the classical languages. Music not only revives the flagging interest, but it would also help to fix foreign words in the memory.

We already have one large collection of Latin songs with music, and a few songs are incorporated in several textbooks and supplementary works for classical teachers. But there are obvious restrictions to the general use of such material. The present pamphlet claims no other merits than convenience and inexpensiveness, and ought to be judged by no higher standard. I trust that it may prove of service in Latin clubs and the social gatherings of the classically minded as well as in the classroom.

From considerations of space the songs are often given in an abridged form. The selection was intentionally made from well-known material so that a musical score could be dispensed with in most cases.

To the editor of the Classical Weekly I am indebted for permission to reproduce two translations from that periodical, and to Professor G. D. Kellogg, of Union College, and Professor A. F. Geyser, of St. Stanislaus Seminary, for putting their work so freely at my disposal. From my wife I have received substantial assistance in selecting new musical settings for some of the numbers.

I. AMERICA¹

Te cano, Patria,
Candida, libera;
 Te referet
Portus et exulum
Et tumulus senum;
Libera montium
 Vox resonet.

Tutor es unicus,
Unus avūm Deus!
 Laudo libens.
Patria luceat,
Libera fulgeat,
Vis tua muniat,
 Omnipotens!

¹ The English words were written (1832) by Rev. S. F. Smith and translated (1914) by Professor George D. Kellogg; cf. Classical Weekly, VIII (1914), 7. The current form of the tune is often credited to an Englishman, Henry Carey (1690-1743).

II. THE STAR-SPANGLED BANNER¹

Oh, potestne cerni, profulgente die,
Salutatam signum circa noctis ad-ventum?

Lati clav(i) et stellae, decertant(e) acie,
Gloriose cingunt oppidi munimentum!-
Iaculumque rubens, globus sursum rumpens
Per noctem monstrant vexillum fulgens.
Stellatumque vexillum volans tegit nos,
Patriam liberam fortiumque domos?

Oh, sic esto semper, manus si libera
Arcet a patria belli vastationem!
Triumphante pace patria prospera.
Deum laudet qui nos statuit nationem!
Victoria me(a) est, quando causa iust(a)
est;
Haec nostra sit vox: "Deus salus nostr(a)
est."

Stellatum vexillum triumphans teget
nos,
Patriam liberam fortiumque domos!

¹ The English words were written (1814) by Francis Scott Key and translated (1918) by Professor A. F. Geyser, of St. Stanislaus Seminary, Florissant, Missouri; cf. Classical Weekly, XI (1918), 191. Anacreon in Heaven, the melody to which the author directed that his poem be sung, is said to have been written (about 1780) by an English composer, John S. Smith.

III. ADESTE FIDELES¹

Adeste, fideles,
Laeti triumphantes;
Venite; venite in Bethlehem;
Natum videte
Regem angelorum;
Venite adoremus, venite adoremus,
Venite adoremus Dominum.

Cantet nunc "Io!"
Chorus angelorum;
Cantet nunc aula coelestium:
"Gloria, gloria
In excelsis Deo!"
Venite, etc.

Ergo qui natus
Die hodierna,
Jesu, tibi sit gloria;
Patris aeterni
Verbum caro factum!
Venite, etc.

¹ The Latin words belong to an unknown author of the seventeenth century. Oakeley's translation into English (1841) is found in most of our hymnals under the title of "O Come, All Ye Faithful." The tune, which is known as the Portuguese Hymn, derives its name from the fact that in England it was first sung in the chapel of the Portuguese Embassy (about 1797). Its composer and the period of its composition are uncertain.

IV. LEAD, KINDLY LIGHT¹

Duc, Mitis Lux, per densas tenebras
 Tu deduc me!
Est atra nox; a domo procul sum;—
 Tu deduc me!
Sit tutus pes; non quaero cernere
Quae procul sunt;—sat unus gradus est!

Non semper Te precabar, Lumen, ut
 Me duceres;
Tum semitam selegi mihimet,—
 Nunc Tu me duc!
Diem caecantem quaero, dum pavens
Superbio: Tu ne memineris!

Potenter, Lux, benedixisti me:
 Abhinc Tu me
Per stagna duc, torrentes, cautes, dum
 Nox fugerit
Et angelorum mane riserint
Amati vultus, paulum perdit!

¹ The English words were written (1833) by Cardinal Newman and translated (1918) by Professor A. F. Geyser, of St. Stanislaus Seminary, Florissant, Missouri. The familiar tune, Lux Benigna, was written (1867) by the famous English composer of hymns, John B. Dykes.

V. ANTIDOTIUM CONTRA
TYRANNIDEM PECCATI¹

Quid, tyranne, quid minaris?
Quid usquam poenarum est,
Quidquid tandem machinaris:
Hoc amanti parum est.

[Chorus]
Dulce mihi cruciari!
Parva vis doloris est.
"Malo mori quam foedari!"
Maior vis amoris est.

Para rogos, quamvis truces,
Et quidquid flagrorum est;
Adde ferrum, adde cruces:
Nil adhuc amanti est.

[Chorus]
Nimis blandus dolor ille!
Una mors, quam brevis est!
Cruciatus amo mille;
Omnis poena levis est.
[Chorus]

¹ The Latin words have been spuriously attributed to St. Augustine (354-430). They may be sung to the Austrian Hymn (F. J. Haydn, 1797), which is usually associated with the hymn beginning, "Glorious things of thee are spoken."

VI. GAUDEAMUS IGITUR²

Gaudeamus igitur,
 Iuvenes dum sumus;
 Post iucundam iuventutem,
 Post molestam senectutem
 Nos habebit humus.

Ubi sunt, qui ante nos
 In mundo fuere?
 Transeas ad superos,
 Abeas ad inferos
 Quos si vis videre.

Vita nostra brevis est,
 Brevi finietur;
 Venit mors velociter,
 Rapit nos atrociter,
 Nemini parcetur.

Vivat et res publica
 Et qui illam regit;
 Vivat nostra civitas;
 Vivat haec sodalitas
 Quae nos huc collegit.

²The second and third stanzas of this Latin song were used as a penitential hymn as early as 1267; in Germany they were expanded to seven stanzas during the eighteenth century, and two others were added at Yale College about the middle of the nineteenth century. There are many variant readings for the text, and I have ventured to introduce a new variation in the last two lines as printed above. The tune to which the words are now sung is likewise a patchwork, but in its present form dates back at least as far as 1788. German students have been accustomed to sing this piece at the close of the burial service of a comrade. Notice that the lines of each stanza must be sung in the following order: 1, 2, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 5. Professor Charles B. Randolph has published an interesting discussion of this and the next two songs in Classical Journal, VII (1912), 291 ff.

VII. INTEGER VITAE¹

Integer vitae scelerisque purus
Non eget Mauris iaculis nequ(e) arcu
Nec venenatis gravida sagittis,
Fusce, pharetra.

Namque me silva lupus in Sabina,
Dum meam canto Lalagen et ultra
Terminum curis vagor expeditis,
Fugit inermem.

Pone me pigris ubi nulla campis.
Arbor aestiva recreatur aura,
Quod latus mundi nebulae malusque
Iuppiter urget.

Pone sub curru nimium propinqui
Solis in terra domibus negata:
Dulce ridentem Lalagen amabo,
Dulce loquentem.

¹ The Latin words are from the twenty-second poem in Horace' first book of Odes and were written not later than 23 B.C. The tune which is generally used in singing this piece was composed as a setting for it by a Berlin oculist, Dr. Friedrich F. Flemming, about 1811, and under the title of Flemming may be found in most hymnals, usually associated with the hymn beginning, "O Holy Savior." Of course, almost any other poem written in the Sapphic stanza, such as Horace Odes i. 2 and 38, and ii. 10, might be sung to the same melody. A musical setting which corresponds more closely to the Sapphic tempo was published by Professor John Greene in Classical Journal, IV (1909), 122.

VIII. LAURIGER HORATIUS¹

Lauriger Horatius,
Quam dixisti verum!
Fugit Euro citius
Tempus edax rerum.

[Chorus]

Ubi sunt O pocula
Dulciora melle,
Rixae, pax, et oscula
Rubentis puellae?

Crescit uva molliter
Et puella crescit,
Sed poeta turpiter
Sitiens canescit.

[Chorus]

Quid iuvat aeternitas
Nominis, amare
Nisi terrae filias
Licet et potare?

[Chorus]

¹ The Latin words were written by an unknown author about 1800. The folk melody to which the words are generally sung furnished the air also for "Maryland, My Maryland."

IX. TWINKLE, TWINKLE¹

Mica, mica, parva stella;
 Miror quaenam sis tam bella!
 Splendens eminus in illo,
 Alba velut gemma, caelo.

Quando fervens sol discessit
 Nec calore prata pascit,
 Mox ostendis lumen purum,
 Micans, micans, per obscurum.

Tibi, noctu qui vagatur,
 Ob scintillulam gratatur;
 Ni micares tu, non sciret
 Quas per vias errans iret.

Meum saepe thalamum luce
 Specularis curiosa;
 Neque carpseris soporem
 Donec venit sol per auram.

¹ The English words are attributed to Jane Taylor (1783-1824), and were translated (about 1841) by Henry Drury. The piece may be sung to the tune of Annie F. Harrison's "In the Gloaming," two stanzas of the words to one of the music. The wistfulness of this melody is more appropriate to the sentiment than are the airs which are ordinarily employed. At the end of every alternate line it is necessary to resolve the half-note into two quarter-notes in order to provide for the extra syllable in bella, caelo, etc.

* The Latin words were written (1908) by the late Professor J. Scott Clark and are based on the Vulgate Version of Phil. 4:8, the motto of Northwestern University. The music is the St. Anthony theme which Brahms mistakenly ascribed to F. J. Haydn but which was probably a Croatian folk-song; it was arranged by Dean P. C. Lutkin to suit the present words.

XII. SPARTAN MARCHING SONG²

"Ἀγερ', ὦ Σπάρτας εὐάνδρω
 κῶροι πατέρων πολιατᾶν, λαιᾶ μὲν Ἴτυν προβάλεσθε,
 δόρυ δ' εὐτόλμως ἀνσχεσθε,
 μὴ φειδόμενοι τᾶς ζωᾶς·
 οὐ γὰρ πάτριον τᾷ Σπάρτῃ.

¹ The words and music are said to be of French origin. The Latin is due to the present editor.

² The Greek words were written by Tyrtæus (about 650 B.C.), the lame schoolmaster who is said to have been sent to Sparta when the Lacedæmonians were told by an oracle to seek a general from Athens. His stirring songs more than compensated for his physical infirmity. By repeating the words and making minor readjustments in the music, it is possible to sing the Greek to the same tune as "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean."

THE GREEK THEATER AND ITS DRAMA

By ROY C. FLICKINGER

PRESS NOTICES

"It constitutes the best treatise we have on the Greek theater. . . . The excellence of the illustrative material is but one indication of the untiring painstaking and energy that characterize the book. . . . The book is a large and unique contribution to the study of the Greek drama and theater and will add distinction to American scholarship."—Classical Journal.

"This book deserves the highest commendation. It is one of the most scholarly books in recent years on a classical subject. . . . It ought to appeal to all general as well as technical students of the drama, especially as it is written in a readable style and contains many mediæval and modern parallels and quotations from modern dramatic critics. . . . A new kind of book on the Greek drama."—Classical Weekly.

"The peculiar excellence of these compact and scholarly chapters is the judicious and rightly proportioned blending of the unavoidable commonplaces of the traditional criticism with the expert's special knowledge and with pertinent illustrations from modern dramatic practice. . . . All students may safely consult it in confidence that they will find here the known facts honestly distinguished from the conjectures of either the author or his sources. And he who runs or merely turns the pages may appreciate the wealth of excellent illustrations and plans that accompanies the description and discussion of the extant remains of all significant Greek and Roman theaters."—Nation.

"A superb piece of book making. . . . To experts the work will need no other justification than its existence, while to general readers it will come as an eminently readable and informing introduction to a perennially interesting department of knowledge."—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

"A book that no serious student of the drama can afford to overlook."—Chicago Daily News.

"Absorbingly interesting."—Chicago Tribune.

"Authoritative."—New York Evening Post.
